SEPTA prepares for possible worker strike

Contingency plan. City and Suburban transit would increase if Regional Rail is interrupted.

Woe is Philly

The looming SEPTA strike would add to a flurry of possible congestion issues to:

- A closed PATCO train track on the Ben Franklin Bridge
- The I-95 rehabilitation project between Girard and Allegheny avenues
- The current construction at Cottman Avenue
- I-495 bridge closure in Wilmington

By the numbers

130K

Regional Rail carries about 50,000 passengers on Saturdays, 37,000 on Sundays and about 130,000 riders on an average weekday, reports say.

With a Regional Rail workers' strike looming, SEPTA is making preparations to reroute the some 40,000 riders this weekend.

Regional Rail train engineers and electrical workers are likely to strike, the Inquirer reported Thursday. Union leaders and SEPTA officials made plans to meet Friday with a mediator in a last-ditch effort to avoid a work stoppage, the newspaper reported.

The entire Regional Rail fleet, which consists of 13 lines, would shut down as of 12:01 a.m. Saturday if the strike comes to fruition.

If this does happen, SEPTA spokesman Andrew Busch said, "We're preparing for contingencies and we'll have a plan up on our website at some point."

"In terms of alternative service," he added, "we would be pointing folks to the subway lines, the trolleys and the buses as possible alternatives."

According to a SEPTA news release, added capacity will be focused on filling gaps between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Early morning and evening service is currently at capacity.

SEPTA is attempting to impose its new contract agreement on 400 Regional Rail workers who are not satisfied with SEPTA's proposed raise.

According to the Inquirer, the union officials said the proposed raise by SEPTA for the workers is too low. SEPTA said the contract will go into effect for the workers on Sunday. Gov. Tom Corbett has asked President Barack Obama to intervene if the workers walk out.

Herbivores. Philly Vegfest is Saturday

Visit Metro.us for more Vegfest details, plus a schedule of events.

Vegetarian and vegan food in Philadelphia will be celebrated for the first time on Saturday at the Humane League's Philly Vegfest at the Shambles on Second and Pine.

To explore the benefits of a plant-based diet as well as vegetarian and vegan options in the city, the event will feature guest speakers, cooking demos and live music.

The Humane League noticed that while this type of festival has occurred in several major cities on the northeastern seaboard, Philadelphia was one of the few that did not have one.

"It's basically a way to showcase all of the vegan and vegetarian options we have in this city right now," said Lydia Chaudhry, volunteer coordinator for the Humane League, "because there's just never been a better time than now to eat vegan or vegetarian in Philadelphia."

This free event includes cooking demonstrations — including one from natural foods chef Christina Pirello, host of PBS series "Christina Cooks" and certified natural chef Sara Glassman. JEREMY RODRIGUEZ

World Meeting of Families

Pope Francis officially invited to Philadelphia

Bishops at the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops spring plenary meeting in New Orleans on Wednesday approved a letter they will send to the Vatican inviting Pope Francis inviting to the World Meeting of Families in 2015 in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia Archbishop Charles J. Chaput admitted that Pope Francis may not RSVP this far in advance but added "we do have good reasons to believe [he] will take part in the meeting, and we're planning to welcome him wholeheartedly."

Chaput also invited all bishops at the meeting, and their families, to the Sept. 22-27 event.

"We wish to take this opportunity to warmly invite Your Holiness to grace us with your presence at this event. We have no doubt that the participants would be deeply honored, and would receive with gratitude your pastoral reflections on the meaning of the family," the letter says. METRO

Alleged rape. Man says he's innocent, sentenced to decades

A Philadelphia man told a judge on Thursday that he was innocent of all charges before being sentenced to 22 to 45 years in prison for raping his former girlfriend and for stabbing her male friend nine times.

Ildelfonso Cruz, 40, was arrested in 2011 for the violent outburst, which occurred when Cruz discovered his girlfriend, whom he had previously physically abused, was moving out of the home they shared in Kensington with the aid of a male friend.

When Cruz discovered them, he attacked the male, stabbing him repeatedly, then kidnapped his girlfriend, held her captive for 12 hours, raped her and repeatedly beat her, according to the prosecutor Branwen McNabb. The male victim survived.

"The defendant showed a complete and utter lack of remorse, even post-conviction," McNabb said at sentencing.

Cruz, who is diagnosed as bipolar and schizophrenic and has been arrested 23 times, told the judge he just wants forgiveness but maintained his innocence. SAM NEWHOUSE

Who's right?

McNabb noted that in a prison phone call, Cruz told a friend to talk to his former girlfriend, telling him, "Something needs to happen." McNabb said this may have constituted witness intimidation.

- But defense attorney Trevan Borum pointed out that the transcript also includes Cruz saying, "I want you to convince her to come and visit me. ... I can take a picture with her."

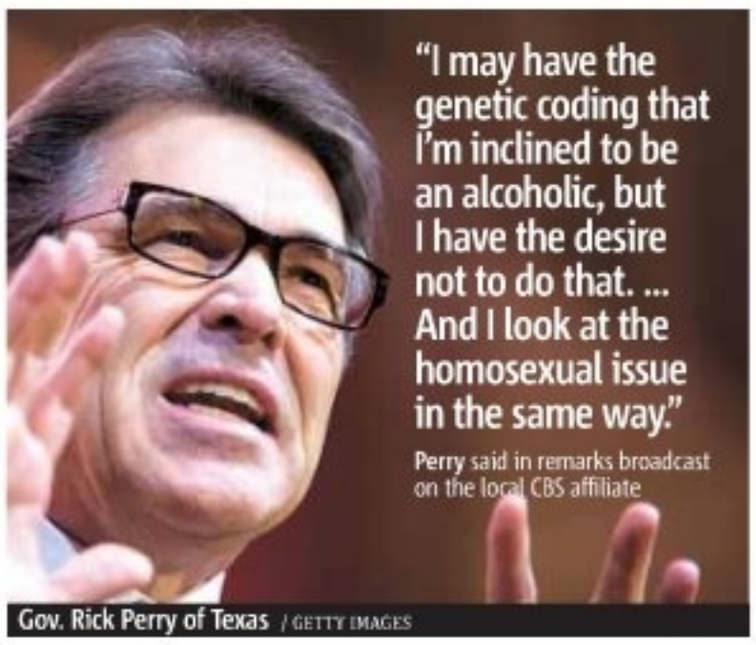
Perry compares homosexuality to alcoholism

Conservative. Perry defends a Texas constitutional amendment that bans same-sex marriage.



"I may have the genetic coding that I'm inclined to be an alcoholic, but I have the desire not to do that. ... And I look at the homosexual issue in the same way."

Gov. Rick Perry of Texas / GETTY IMAGES

Texas Gov. Rick Perry, a Republican presidential aspirant whose 2012 campaign was sunk partly because of verbal slips, has compared homosexuality to alcoholism, coming under fire again for an argument he has made previously.

Perry, in an appearance Wednesday night in San Francisco at the Commonwealth Club of California, was asked whether he believes homosexuality was a disorder, according to local media reports.

"I may have the genetic coding that I'm inclined to be an alcoholic, but I have the desire not to do that," Perry said in remarks broadcast on a CBS affiliate. "And I look at the homosexual issue in the same way."

A few people in the audience gasped in response, according to the CBS report. In his 2008 book, "On My Honor," Perry made a similar comparison.

"From a scientific standpoint it's not a very apt analogy. Homosexuality is not a mental disorder, alcoholism is a mental disorder," said Jack Drescher, distinguished fellow of the American Psychiatric Association and a psychiatry professor at New York Medical College. REUTERS

Iraq. Obama warns of US action as jihadists push on Baghdad

Kurdish Peshmerga forces and Iraqi special forces deploy their troops outside of the oil-rich city of Kirkuk, Iraq, on Thursday. / GETTY IMAGES

President Barack Obama threatened U.S. military strikes in Iraq on Thursday against Sunni Islamist militants who have surged out of the north to menace Baghdad and want to establish their own state in Iraq and Syria.

Iraqi Kurdish forces took advantage of the chaos to take control of the oil hub of Kirkuk as the troops of the Shi'ite-led government abandoned posts, alarming Baghdad's allies both in the West and in neighboring Shi'ite regional power Iran.

"I don't rule out anything, because we do have a stake in making sure that these jihadists are not getting a permanent foothold in either Iraq or Syria," Obama said at the White House when asked whether he was contemplating air strikes. Officials later stressed that ground troops would not be sent in, however. REUTERS

US political polarization increasing

Americans are more divided along political lines than at any time in two decades, with about one in five defining themselves as consistently liberal or conservative, a poll showed on Thursday.

The hardening of ideological positions also means that more Americans are less likely to favor political compromise, the survey by the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press said.

"Liberals and conservatives disagree over where they want to live, the kind of people they want to live around and even whom they would welcome into their families," it said. REUTERS

Winner. 10th annual New York toilet paper wedding dress contest

There was something old, something new, something borrowed and something double-ply for 10 designers who battled it out on Thursday for $10,000 and the top prize in the 10th annual toilet paper wedding dress contest held in New York City.

The elaborate gowns, headpieces, purses and lacy veils showed off at the competition could be made of nothing but rolls of Charmin Ultra Soft toilet paper, and materials like glue, tape and thread, organizers of the event by Cheap-Chic-Weddings.com said.

"I am blown away," said Kate Pankoke, a contest judge who also owns Elaya Vaughn Bridal and was a contestant on seasons 11 and 12 of the reality television show Project Runway.

"It's really impressive what they can get toilet paper to do," she said.

The gowns were adorned with intricate toilet paper pearls and flowers.

The winning dress, named Romance on a Roll and crafted by 28-year-old Susan Brennan of Orchard Lake, Michigan, took some 20 rolls to craft. REUTERS

The wispy "Weird Beard Cruzer" is the first of a three-part collaboration between Santa Cruz Skateboards of California and artist-illustrator Jeremy Fish. Fish tells Metro why a hairy ride is the only way to get around.

What's the point of a bearded board?
It's skateboarding – not everything needs a purpose but who wouldn't want a f—ing hairy skateboard? It's function is just to have fun.

Is this a nod to the hipster trend for beards?
I live in San Francisco where beards have been on trend since the 1960s. I have been wearing a very large beard off and on for almost a decade now, and I thought riding around on my facial hair would be fun.

Are you expecting people to tweak and trim the skateboard's hair into different styles?
I personally don't think trimming and grooming makes any sense. Just let it flow in the wind — keep it natural.

Q&A

Is the cheeky-looking long-eared creature at the bottom of the board a kind of rabbit or genitalia?

It is a "cheeky" rabbit hiding in the beard.

Happiness. Get on the path to inner peace with "The Practice."

Barb Schmidt had it all: a business empire, beauty, a handsome husband. But she also had a secret problem, and when it led her to seek therapy, she found the happiness that had been missing all along.

"Bulimia is one of those diseases that takes a big physical and mental toll," she says.

Therapy "had to crack me open," she says."When I left treatment, it propelled me to deepen my conscious concept of God."

Her new book, "The Practice," a three-part guide to daily life and cultivating inner peace, is the culmination of 30 years of education and the motivation behind Schmidt's nonprofit Peaceful Mind Peaceful Life. By structuring her methods around how she's applied them in her own life, "The Practice" is more self-help autobiography than a strict guidebook. And because you're all that stands in the way of your own happiness, "The Practice" is about spring cleaning the soul of some bad habits.

Author Barb Schmidt
JEFFERY THOLL

Get to know you

Schmidt works to "demystify" meditation. "The more we do that sitting process, the more we don't have the impatience, the anger and the violence that surround us."

Your best ally

"The mind will tell you you're not good enough," she says. But negative and positive thoughts can't coexist; you decide the path.

Loosen up

The irony of the brain is that it tries to control the external world. Tell yourself, "I can be in charge of my internal world, intercept the negative thoughts with affirmation, mantra or breath."

The three steps

1 Waking Up. "For five minutes in the morning, collect yourself. Let the energy of your body and your heart connect. Start with peace and strength, and you'll carry that connectedness — a deep sense of knowing that you can handle anything — all day."

2 Living Present. "When you're talking with someone, be there with them. When you're watching TV, pay attention to the program. When you recognize them, ordinary moments can become extraordinary."

3 Letting Go. "We can look back on the day and take a different action tomorrow, but we can't change anything that's happened. Take note of what happened, good or bad, and learn from it to sleep without conflict."

It was a good many days

"22 Jump Street" was also another chance for Hill and Tatum to spend time with Ice Cube, who plays their angry chief. But Hill wasn't afraid to pester one of his heroes with endless questions.

"I grew up in Los Angeles in the '80s, so Ice Cube and Magic Johnson were who I idolized," Hill says. Hill found that he would answer anything he was asked about N.W.A., "Three Kings" or "Amerikkka's Most Wanted." He even discovered that Cube's "It Was a Good Day" — one of Hill's favorite ever songs — was not, as rumored, about a specific day.

Channing Tatum and Jonah Hill reunite for the sequel to "21 Jump Street." Find our review on page 16. / GETTY IMAGES

They're just better together

Reunion. Jonah Hill and Channing Tatum talk about their chemistry and bugging the hell out of Ice Cube.

Jonah Hill is trying to pinpoint the exact scene in 2012's "21 Jump Street" when he knew he had chemistry with Channing Tatum.

"I mean, I would say the first scene," Tatum offers.

"We hit it off right away," Hill says, more seriously. One of the first scenes they shot wound up being the one that features Johnny Depp making a cameo as his character from the '80s Fox show. "We were supposed to jump over this couch, and Chan immediately did this flip over it. And then I walked around it. I think that set the standard for the two movies: that one guy is really good at stuff and the other is not."

The new "22 Jump Street" — which takes their not-so-young undercover cops to college to bust another drug ring — plays on the ideas of sequels, exploring the anxieties about not wanting to repeat the first. For Hill, it was a chance to refine what he did before.

"I felt more creatively inspired to think of the most clumsy way to do each stunt," Hill says. "You're putting together a puzzle to find how one would obviously do something, then ask yourself, 'How can I completely mess that up?'"

For Tatum, this was another chance to prove that his comedic turn in the first was no fluke. But when asked if he's up to Hill's improv skills, he's honest: "Absolutely not. I've only seen one person — and she's in the movie — be able to make Jonah even take a little step back. And that was Jillian Bell," he says, referring to the actress who plays the insult-firing roommate of a student with whom Hill's character sleeps. "She brings the pain with him. I don't have many scenes with her, so I was excited when I did, even though I knew I was going to take some hits along the way. I knew it would be like being in the ring with Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier and just being like, 'What's going to happen?'"

Hill says making room for other people to be funny is one thing he learned from Judd Apatow and Seth Rogen. "Jillian Bell's part was, as one of the writers, I would say incredibly underwritten," Hill explains. "When Jillian came in and auditioned, we started improvising and she made the part her own. That's what actors should do, if it's a comedy or drama. She made the part great. It wasn't written great.

"That's the fun of being an actor or a producer or whatever: You get to see people turn something bland into something wonderful."

Hill and Tatum try to look tough for a bit in "22 Jump Street." / GLEN WILSON

The future

While Hill is looking forward to taking a slight break from movies, to return for something he's passionate about, Tatum is very busy. He's been cast as Gambit in the next "X-Men" movie. "It's the only X-Men that I really followed," Tatum reveals, saying he's not really a big fan. "He's just the coolest one to me: the smoking, drinking, woman-chasing, cussing one. He's not even a good guy. He's a thief."

Dad time

In diapers

But Tatum does have other duties, such as now being a parent. "I'm solid at diaper changing. If a guy isn't solid at diaper changing, I don't know what he's there for, really, because they're not there for the first seven months. The mama's the end-all-be-all," he says. He also gets to see through his daughter's eyes. "I love watching her experience new things for the first time. Like she just saw a kite for the first time the other day. She was like, "WHAT? What is it?"

Jonah Hill and Channing Tatum aren't afraid to look stupid in "22 Jump Street." / GLEN WILSON

The big sequel that's self-aware

Follow-up. "22 Jump Street" is afraid it will be terrible, which somehow makes it even funnier.

Anyone making a sequel should be freaking out when faced with the obvious questions: Why does it need to exist (beyond money)? What it will do differently from the source material, if anything?

"22 Jump Street" should especially be worried: 2012's "21 Jump Street" was a flash-in-the-pan effort — a comedic take on an old TV favorite with a duo so mismatched that they were bound to produce chemistry. No one expected much from it, and directors Phil Lord and Chris Miller — as they did with "The Lego Movie" — produced fathoms more than was required. How do you top that? Can you?

"22 Jump Street" puts these questions in the film itself, often in the words of characters. As promised at the end of the first movie, undercover cops Schmidt and Jenko (Jonah Hill and Channing Tatum) are going to college. But they'd rather not: They'd rather be "Bad Boys" — two-gun-wielding action gods. Their dialogue often directly comments on the similarities and difference between their glory days and their new misadventures in higher ed.

This is far from the first self-aware sequel. ("Gremlins 2" did this 24 years ago.) But the meta jokes aren't there because the film is being hip; they're all borne out of anguish. This movie doesn't want to be another dumb sequel. So it crams so many self-aware jokes into its running time that the sheer volume of them becomes part of the joke. (Of course, some of the written jokes are intentionally funny too, including a particularly transcendent closing credits sequence.)

Despite its fears, "22 Jump Street" does feature real progress. Schmidt and Jenko are split up again, but this time they wonder if they're even a good team — if the members of this odd couple wouldn't be better off with like-minded partners. Jenko quickly falls for a football bro, in one of many jokes that draw a thin line between homoerotic and mere gay panic.

By now we know the beefcake, square-jawed Tatum is actually even goofier than Hill, and his comedy bits — like talking about "the anals of history" — continue to pave a path in what should be a long career as a not-so-secret cut-up.

The freshness here is gone, but "22 Jump Street" is consistently inventive nonetheless. It's an important reminder that humor isn't strictly about novelty — it's about quality. And that remains high in "22 Jump Street," even if the central jokes about college — frat parties, beer pong and slam poetry — are not even the best part.

Rock 'n' roll. This Swedish film about tween punk girls rules

Mira Barkhammar, Mira Grosin and Liv Lemoyne form a band in "We Are the Best!" / MAGNOLIA PICTURES

Review

'We Are the Best!'

Director: Lukas Moodysson

Stars: Mira Barkhammar, Mira Grosin

Rating: NR

It's Stockholm in 1982, and two tween girls, Bobo (Mira Barkhammar) and Klara (Mira Grosin), have cut their hair short and decided to start a punk band, despite being told that their beloved genre is already dead. Like many punk legends, they don't know how to play instruments, and they're not that musically talented, even after they coerce a third girl — a goody-goody classical guitarist named Hedvig (Liv LeMoyne) — to chuck her flowing locks and make them a trio.

Returning to the giddy portrayals of youth with which he made his name, director Lukas Moodysson (of the stellar lesbian teen romance "Show Me Love") follows his characters as they get slightly better. At first they're kicking actual bands out of rehearsal spaces to bang like wild children on drums and strum artlessly on guitar strings. As their talent minutely increases, their songs go from being complaints about sports to shouts for crushing capitalism. It's not that they have any idea what they're talking about, but such is punk and such is being 12 or 13 (or 18, or 45).

"We Are the Best!" portrays the kind of rush of unfettered, probably crap inspiration that one relishes before self-criticism and self-doubt kicks in. None of these girls may last long with punk, but for the moment, it's consumed their lives, allowing them to destroy their childhood selves for a personality type they will one day destroy as well.

Lopez is now a 'fitness robot'

Jennifer Lopez recently split from choreographer boyfriend Casper Smart, but apparently it's not for the reason you might think. Sources tell Radar Online that Smart got fed up with how much of a "fitness robot" the "Jenny from the Block" singer had become, even though she was already in shape. "Jennifer's obsession with her own body is out of control. There's no doubt she's worked herself into the ground to achieve her killer shape," a source explains.

Lohan: No more freckles

Lindsay Lohan is looking to turn over a whole new leaf, and that apparently involves changing one very iconic part of her image. "She's always loved her freckles — well, pretended to, anyway — but now she's decided it's time to get rid of them and she's looking into having them either bleached or lasered away," a source tells the National Enquirer. "Lindsay is known for trying new things, but she's shocked friends and family members by suddenly getting irate over her freckles."

1 Bieber obsessing over Gomez

Social media is the bane of the fickle heart, as Justin Bieber is proving with his erratic postings pertaining to on-again, off-again girlfriend Selena Gomez. While it seemed that the couple finally split for good a few months ago, Bieber doesn't seem so sure. Just this week, he posted a close-up photo of the two in an embrace with the caption, "Our love is unconditional." Suggesting a tentative Romeo, he quickly deleted the posting — but not before many of his 16 million Instagram followers screen-grabbed it and reposted it.

2 Thicke continues his stalker behavior

It's usually non-famous people who stalk famous people, but we have the exception that makes the rule right here: Robin Thicke just keeps finding ways to get his soon-to-be ex-wife Paula Patton back. His latest attempt is to call his next album "Paula." What ever happened to releasing a self-titled album? This musical stalking thing has gotten out of hand! He's written songs about her, is talking about her onstage every chance he gets — and now this. Can't you two just work it out in private? That way your fans can get fun hits just like "Blurred Lines" on your next album, instead of creepy stalking love songs.

Art Splash. Here's what to check out during the PMA's kid-friendly summer series.

Parents, get your creative kiddos ready. The Art Splash series at the Philadelphia Museum of Art is back for its second year.

Over 10 weeks this summer, Art Splash will offer programs and activities designed for families to do together. Last year, the series drew more than 27,000, according to Art Splash curator Emily Schreiner. "It's a way for families to spend creative, quality time together in the museum, and a way to envision the museum as a place to feel welcome as a family," she says.

In the Splash Studio, families "meet" a different masterpiece each week — such as Monet's water lilies, Picasso's musicians and medieval armor you can try on — with programming tailored to different age groups.

HAVING A FATHER'S DAY DRINK WITH GEORGE WASHINGTON

"Hi Mr. President, can I get you a drink?"

The ghost of George Washington looks up from the bar. The Father of the Nation has agreed to share some advice in honor of Father's Day. "Sure. I'll have a beer," he says.

"How about a Sam Adams?" I reply.

"You're kidding, right? You know he was an anti-Federalist."

I've asked him to weigh in on a variety of topics, and I start ticking through them, starting with the divisive nature of politics. "To be honest, Mr. President, we have so many people in office who are unwilling to compromise, we can't get anything done."

"We never had that problem in my day," he says. "Oh, we took our canes to each other and we had the occasional duel, but we always reached some sort of deal. Of course, there was that whole dust-up with the Brits. Ha! Now that was partisanship."

I move on. "We're having problems with immigration. Any advice?"

"Hmmm. More trouble with the Scots?"

I move on again. "You may have heard that our economy is troubled, and a lot of people think the rich should pay more taxes."

"Really? Have you considered a tax on wig powder?"

On it goes. After a while, I respectfully say, "Mr. President, people in this town are always invoking your name, saying the Father of the Nation would or would not like some piece of legislation. But it seems like the country you knew is so different from ours."

"What did you expect? I've been dead more than 200 years. All I know is this: Good fathers raise kids who can stand on their own and work out their disagreements. If you can do that, you still have the country I dreamed of. If not, what's left won't be worth having."

He slipped on his coat, adjusted his sword, and slid from the bar stool. "I've got to go get my teeth sanded. By the way, what's going on in my home state of Virginia?"

"Oh, you heard about Eric Cantor!"

"Eric who?"

"Good one, Mr. President. Happy Father's Day."

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

Some things should really just stay personal

Re: 'I'm proud of who I am' (Metro, June 10)

Here's my question on this article: Why is it that now anyone who is gay or transgender feels the need to inform anyone who'll listen what their status is?

Where is the filter on personal information in this world now? Do I really need to know who's gay and who's transgender? I have no need for that much personal knowledge of some one I don't know or care to know about.

People like that need to get over themselves, its not that damn serious. I'm straight — do I feel the need to announce to the world that I'm straight every time I walk in a room? No, because who really cares. There was definitely something more newsworthy than his sex change.

I know the paper is free, and you get what you pay for, but in the future could you please spare those of us who are who are actually looking for news from the fluff pieces.

Lee begins rehab

Phillies lefty ace Cliff Lee began his program to return to pitching form for an ailing elbow strain Thursday when he tossed 40-45 times from flat ground. He was happy with the results. "It's feeling good, progressing, it's getting there," Lee told reporters afterward. "There's a little tightness, but that's from all the exercises I've been doing. Overall, it feels good."

Phillies' core not at fault for losses

MLB. The Phillies have gotten a surprising and consistent lift from their homegrown veterans.

The Phillies' core of offensive players has set a stellar example for newcomers like Reid Brignac, second from left. / GETTY IMAGES

If Phillies fans knew at the end of spring training that by mid-June the Phillies core four would be healthy and productive and the National League East would be full of weak teams, there would have been reason for optimism.

However, despite respectable seasons for Chase Utley, who has reverted to All-Star form, Jimmy Rollins, who has rediscovered his power stroke and is in the top 10 in the NL in walks, Ryan Howard, who is sixth in the NL in RBIs and strong all-around play from Carlos Ruiz, the Phillies are at the bottom of the NL.

It would be a reach to blame the icons from the greatest run in Phillies history for the ineptitude that has plagued Ryne Sandberg's team. The Phillies have been crippled by virtually no production from third base. Domonic Brown has struggled mightily after what appeared to be a breakout season and Ben Revere has had trouble getting on base.

And then there are the bullpen issues.

Quoted

"We're not that far back. There's still time to get back."

Visit Metro.us to read more about the Phils' sweep of the Padres.

"We have to pick it up," Revere said. "There's a number of guys that have yet to play up to their potential. We know what we're capable of. We just have to get out there and do it."

Considering how poorly the Phillies have played, they're fortunate to be only seven games out of first place after completing a sweep of the Padres on Thursday.

Manager Ryne Sandberg clings to hope that the Phillies could turn things around by winning a few games in a row.

"We still haven't had a hot streak," Sandberg said.

A third of the season is already by the books and this incredibly inconsistent team appears unable to put together the kind of winning streak it needs to right the leaky ship. The Phillies have not put together a four-game winning streak in over a year.

"But we have the talent to get something going," Revere said.

Phillies complete sweep of Padres, Cubs series next

Heading into their series against the Padres on Tuesday, the Phillies needed to take care of business in all three games to have any chance at getting back into the NL East playoff picture.

With the lowly Cubs coming to town Friday, the Phillies have a chance to really take advantage of a weak spot in the schedule. They did their part Thursday with Kyle Kendrick on the mound, breaking through for a 7-3 win over San Diego.

Reid Brignac drove in two runs in the bottom of the sixth to break a 2-2 deadlock and John Mayberry Jr. added some insurance with a three-run blast to help clinch the Phillies sweep.

After the wins, the Phillies will welcome Roberto Hernandez, David Buchanan and A.J. Burnett will start for the Phillies in the three-game set, facing off against Jake Arrieta, Edwin Jackson and Travis Wood.

Kendrick and Cole Hamels have given the Phillies overworked bullpen a rest, taking some of the pressure off the Phillies' starters for the upcoming series.

LIONEL MESSI

Lionel Messi

Age: 26
Country: Argentina
Club: Barcelona (La Liga)
Honors: 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012 Ballon d'Or (best player in the world)

There are very few things to be said about Lionel Messi which haven't already been said.

He is the best player in the world, and you'll find few arguments to the contrary. With him winning his first La Liga title in 2004-05, it's easy to forget Messi is only 26 years old and playing in his third World Cup this month.

The 5-foot-6 dynamo is unmatched on the pitch in terms of offensive skill. And he isn't just a threat to score every game, he pretty much does score every game. Messi has played in 36 games for Barcelona this season, split between La Liga and the Champions League, and has 36 goals. He also has 11 assists.

But that is actually a slowed pace from last season, when he had an astounding 46 goals and 12 assists in 28 La Liga games.

Messi gives every person who wasn't born a 6-foot-3 athletic freak someone to root for. Just know it's a very large bandwagon.

It's no secret the United States doesn't go crazy over the English Premier League, Spain's La Liga or the German Bundesliga. So there's a good chance you haven't been following the world of soccer (yes, football) over the past four years.

Much has changed among the stars of the sport. The winner of the Golden Ball as best player, Uruguay's Diego Forlan, is over the hill and Brazil's Neymar is king.

And if you think David Beckham is still a star, you're stuck in 2006.

Cristiano Ronaldo

Age: 29
Country: Portugal
Club: Real Madrid (La Liga)
Honors: 2008 and 2013 Ballon d'Or (best player in the world), two-time La Liga top scorer, 2007-08 EPL Golden Boot

Cristiano Ronaldo is known as much for his slicked-back hair and playboy style as he is for his on-field skills. But he has talent to spare as well.

The 29-year-old striker carries a burden unlike Messi, however, because of his off-field reputation. He is not loved for his skill or even always respected, due to a propensity to be seen as a diva. He'll take dives and complain about calls, drawing the ire of opposing fans, who often want to see him fail. But he rarely does.

Ronaldo has won the Premier League title three times in a row (2006 to 2009) while he was a part of Manchester United. They also won the Champions League in 2007-08 and was part of an FA Cup winning side in 2003-04. Ronaldo made the very expensive (read: a $132 million transfer fee) jump to La Liga and Real Madrid in 2009, where he won a league crown in 2011-12.

RONALDO HAS BEEN DATING RUSSIAN SUPERMODEL IRINA SHAYK FOR THE PAST FOUR YEARS.

LUIS SUAREZ

Luis Suarez

Age: 27
Country: Uruguay
Club: Liverpool (EPL)
Honors: 2014 PFA Players' Player of the Year, 2013-14 Premier League Golden Boot (top goal scorer)

Uruguay doesn't carry the same American recognition as Brazil or Argentina as a soccer superpower, but they've had plenty of success — and stars.

Suarez eschewed La Liga, like many South American players choose, to play for Dutch clubs Groningen and Ajax before signing with EPL side Liverpool in 2010 for about $38.3 million.

He has received a bad reputation, probably with reason, for multiple suspensions in his tenure. He was suspended on separate occasions for biting a player and for racist comments made toward an opponent. He also had an infamous, uncalled handball in the 2010 World Cup quarterfinals.

ROBIN VAN PERSIE

Robin van Persie

Age: 30
Country: Netherlands
Club: Manchester United (EPL)
Honors: 2012 PFA Players' Player of the Year, two-time EPL Golden Boot

Manchester United is the biggest soccer club in the world and Robin van Persie is its best player.

He's also the captain of the Dutch national team, which is a dark horse to win the 2014 World Cup.

His country's all-time leading goal scorer had a somewhat pedestrian EPL campaign (12 goals and three assists in 21 games), but led all players with 11 goals in qualifying for the World Cup. If he is on form this month, the Netherlands has a chance to upset some of the favorites.

Who will be the No. 2 — Mark Sanchez or Matt Barkley? / GETTY IMAGES

USC alumni battling to back up Foles

NFL. The Eagles signed Mark Sanchez to be the Eagles' backup QB, but don't sleep on Matt Barkley.

No one knows of the importance of a backup quarterback more than an Eagles fan.

Whether it is Jeff Garcia stepping in for Donovan McNabb, or Nick Foles filling in when Michael Vick went down, the Birds have had their fate tied to a backup signal caller many times.

Which makes the battle between newly acquired Mark Sanchez and returning third-stringer Matt Barkley so interesting.

"There is no decision," Chip Kelly said at a press conference earlier this week when asked about Sanchez working with the second unit. "We're just getting reps. So there's not a decision of who's who."

The Eagles are in OTAs, and officially position battles haven't even started yet. And that is a good thing for players on the Birds, particularly the quarterbacks. They can work together and push one another without the worry of job security getting in the way.

With Foles, Sanchez and Barkely all watching film and taking reps together, the Eagles are reaping the rewards of three talented quarterbacks helping to build a strong unit.

Sanchez has been impressive to Kelly lately, and is the early favorite to be the No. 2.

"He's done a really nice job," the coach said of Sanchez. "[It's a] unique situation for Mark because he's probably ahead of where Nick and Michael [Vick] were last year because he has Nick to rely on. So everything was new for everybody in the quarterback room last year."

Phillies are still inept at home

The Phillies just can't get it going at home.

Entering yesterday's game, the Phils were 14-19 with a paltry .230 batting average with just 30 home runs.

That's hard to believe and it brings to mind an old Billy Wagner quote:

"I just gave up a 258-foot home run," Wagner said. "Man, it's so easy to hit homers in this park."

Flyers sign forward

Hextall makes first signing as Flyers GM

The Flyers announced they had signed free agent forward Pierre-Edouard Bellemare, a dynamic scorer from France, Thursday.

Bellemare, 29, has spent his entire professional career in Europe, playing mostly in Sweden.

Last season for Skellefea he netted 20 goals and 15 assists in 52 games.

He played for his home country — France — at the 2014 World Championships where he scored three goals and five assists in eight games.

The NHL's unrestricted free agent period begins July 1, a few weeks after the conclusion of the Stanley Cup Final. METRO

FANTASY PLAYERS LIVING ON A SCHEME

According to reports out of organized team activities, every NFL player is in the best shape of his life and ready for a breakout year. Don't fall for that trap.

The real nuggets worth mining for during the offseason program relate to usage and scheme. Changes in how a player is positioned can lead to massive swings in statistical output.

60 minutes time

Under fired offensive coordinator Mike Sherman, Mike Wallace exclusively lined up wide on the right side of the formation and mostly ran vertical clear-out routes. It resulted in a meager 930 yards and five touchdowns. New OC Bill Lazor is changing things up, using Wallace at all three receiver spots and even giving him some snaps out of the backfield. Wallace will have plenty of rebound value in middle rounds of fantasy drafts.

Christine Michael is receiving a lot of buzz in the offseason for his athletic ability. / GETTY IMAGES

Manly Christine

Casual fans may not be aware of Christine Michael because he played 26 snaps as a rookie in 2013. But he's on the radar of the Seahawks and the NFL. Seattle's coaches won't stop raving about Michael, and analyst Louis Riddick called him the most gifted running back drafted in the last five years.
